FIGHTING CHANCE

Duncan Darrow
Chairman of the Board
Fighting Chance

Welcome to Friends . . . Old and New,

In honor of our 5th anniversary, this year's annual report has a special feature. It is a "diary" of the major milestones in the development of Fighting Chance, and an illustration of our progress, year-by-year. We call it our "long and winding road."

In 2002 Fighting Chance started out with the aim of being a "clearinghouse" for cancer care resources on the East End. We did this by preparing a free guide -- called "Coping With Cancer on the East End." It proved to be an empowering tool for cancer patients and nearly ten thousand copies have been distributed.

We also had a unique vantage point from which to spot the "gaps" in the support system. Things that were desperately needed by cancer patients but were not available. To fill these gaps, we started creating and administering programs of our own.

Before long, it was more accurate to refer to us as a "counseling and resource center," which is how Fighting Chance is described today.

The greatest demand is for professional counseling, so we have two oncology social workers on staff. From our office we provide one-on-one counseling and also a support group for cancer patients. Meanwhile, another social worker answers questions that are emailed to us from cancer patients who visit the Fighting Chance website. The site gets over 5,000 visitors per month.

Our office is run by yet another specialist, who is someone trained as a "patient navigator" at the National Cancer Institute. That means she is adept at guiding patients through Internet research, informing them about the side effects of therapies like chemo, finding the most promising clinical trials and resolving health insurance issues.

So you can see that what we do has changed a bit over the past five years. But our core belief is the same as the day we started: that everyone who battles cancer deserves a fighting chance.

Sincerely,

Duncan N. Darrow
Chairman

in-person counseling

One of the distinctive features of Fighting Chance is that we employ oncology social workers. That means someone with a Masters degree in social work with significant experience working with oncology patients. Specifically, Karrie Zampini Robinson, our Director of Clinical Programs came to Fighting Chance in 2005 after sixteen years a Director of the Post-treatment Resource Program at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center.

e-counseling

e-counseling – has permitted Fighting Chance to provide professional advice to cancer patients and their loved ones on a nationwide basis.

Our advisory emails are one-of-a-kind – based on a careful review of each email inquiry, and a response tailored to the needs that our professionals discern. Our counselors need to have at least a masters degree in social work and be exceptionally internet-literate.

Suzie O'Connor is someone with cancer who came to Fighting Chance for help. She was counseled by Karrie Robinson and Heather Hewitt, two of our staff members. Suzie was helped by the South Fork Breast Health coalition or "SFBC", and in the middle of '06, Suzie wrote us a letter, and here are excerpts...

Mr. Duncan Darrow
c/o Fighting Chance
21 Jefferson Street
Sag Harbor, New York 11963

May 6, 2006

Dear Mr. Darrow.

Since we have never met personally, let me introduce myself. My name is Suzie O'Connor, I am a year-round resident of Amagansett and I just happen to have cancer.

As life goes, I found my lump when John, my husband, was facing his last days. My husband passed away last April and all promises were kept. But I was a basket case who curled up in a ball - became recluse and was just waiting to die.

I know I would not be here today if it were not for Karrie Robinson. Of course there are other people that have entered the picture -- Heather Hewitt, also an incredible woman.

In 17 years now I have met lots of doctors, nurses, and social workers, but there is something that makes Fighting Chance and SFBC... stand out just a little bit more. I think it's the "personal" in the grass roots organizations... you're friends and neighbors... we're all fighting and rooting for each other and that's powerful medicine...

Unfortunately, I have not met all of the other people who make up Fighting Chance -- but I want them to know how grateful I am to have all of you in my life.

And if I beat this Cancer I want to be able to give back -- in any way possible -- I want to be able to help someone the same way you helped me.

my gratitude and love to all -
Suzie O'Connor
